

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method for identifying individuals with Parkinson's disease and/or individuals at risk for developing Parkinson's disease, comprising screening nucleic acids from the individual for a mutation in the ADH1C gene, as well as different uses thereof.